More Assaults

New Communist assaults were reported throughout South Vietnam today. The heaviest were in the area of embattled Quang Tri, 404 miles north of Saigon, official spokesmen said.

Heavy fighting in and around Quang Tri, with North Vietnamese rocket attacks and artillery, left at least 200 Communists and 25 government troops dead, spokesmen said.

The North Vietnamese made a new attempt to cut vital Highway 1 between Quang Tri and Huc by shelling a nawly built bridge at My Chanh.

South Vietnamesc spokesmen said that marine and airborne troops in and around Quang Tri were struck by about 1.300 artillery and mortar rounds yesterday.

Navy Pilots' Claims U.S. Navy pilots from the aircraft carrier Hancock claimed that they destroyed three anti-zircraft guns and silenced three other guns and an unknown number of artillery positions nine miles southwest of Quang Tri. Heavy fighting also was reported 10 miles west of Hue near King Base, where South Vietnamese infantrymen withstood a 400-round mortar barrage, then killed 18 attacking Communists at a cost of 20 men wounded, the Saigon high command said.

Closer to Saigon, the high command claimed that troops had reopened a stretch of Highway 13 from Lai Khe to Chon Thanh. 30 to 40 miles north of the capital. But fighting was reported nearby. An estimated 500 North Vietnamese troops are in the area.

price rise in Britain's national dish—fish and chips.

The main points in the court's air-noint ruling were that: Ali parties should insure that no action is taken to age it should take no administrative, judicial or other measures against British or German ships or their crews for fishing inside the 50-mile zone.

Britain argues that the 1961 Anglo-Icelandic accord ending the "cod war" over the extension of Icelandic fishing waters to 12 miles provided for any disputes arising from the agreement to be referred to the court.

But Iceland coutends that the agreement was not a permanent one and is no longer applicable Iceland last week put forward comprenise proposals for a resumption of negotiations with Britain. They would allow Bri:ish ships to fish in certain areas

'Could Jeopardize Negotiations'

White House Cites Concern On Salinger at Peace Talks

"It is ironle that the White House thinks a brief, middlelevel inquiry about the prisoners of war might interfere with negotiations," Sen. McGovern said. In his comments. Mr. Ziegler responded to questions on the matter by saying, "When a rep-resentative for the opposition candidate is in touch with the North Vietnamese, this could jeopardize the President's efforts to achieve a peaceful settlement in Vletnam.

Briefing Declined When newsmen asked how they could "jeopardize" the Nixon administration peace negotiations, Mr. Ziegler noted that Sen. McGovern bas declined to be briefed on the present negotiating efforts.

Mr. Kissinger, the President's national security advisor, met in a secret session in Paris Monday with North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho and with chief Paris negotiator Xuan Thuy. After a brief stop m Switzerland, he went to Salgon where today he met with President Nguyen Van Thieu amid speculation that the admin-Istration's peace negotiations with the Communists may have reached a "breakthrough" stage. Mr. Salinger. White House press secretary under Presidents John F. Kennedy and Lyndon B. Johnson, met with North Vietnamese negotiators on July 18 and Aug. 9 in Paris to discuss the problem of U.S. war prisoners.

He said yesterday that Sen, Mc-Govern had asked him to contact the Hanoi representatives "on one point only—if there was any chance of releasing prisoners and if there was any change in their position on the prisoners and anything that would induce them to change."

He said that he put the question to two members of the delegation staff in Paris on July 18, the day before Mr. Kissinger met with Le Duc Tho, a meeting which Mr. Salinger was told about.

In asking about the U.S. prisoners. Mr. Salinger said, he also stated "what has been Sen Mc-Govern's public pos!tion—toat his desire to end the war was greater than his desire to see the war remain as a political issue and. therefore, if they felt they could make peace, they should not delav.

He said that the Hanoi staff members called him two and a half weeks later and they met again on Aug. 9, "The, told me the word from Hanoi was that there was no change on the POWs and the prisoners will not be relessed until hostilities are ended." Mr. Salinger told a reporter. On this point, Mr. Ziegler responded today to a questioner: We assume that would be the view-that no one would want negotiations to be unproductive just because we are in an elec-Asked whether he was speaking

Sen. McGovern replied at the White House, saying that Mr. Nixon has had 3 1/2 years to end the war and notain the POWs' release and has failed to do so.

Global Junket

"The President now has his chief foreign policy specialist on a highly publicized global junket on the eve of the Republican National Convention: That is what is interfering with quiet, serious, professional negotiations far more than anything else possibly could."

In the Senate, meanwhile, Republican leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said that Mr. Salinger was acting like a "junior grade Henry Kiminger." He noted Sen. McGovern's differing statements about the Salinger mission and said, "If the candidate had been President, he would have shaken the country by his inde-

Similar defiance was predicted by union officials at Grimsby and Goole in northeastern England.

At Scuntherpe on the River Trent, 500 police again cordoned off a small nonunion dock at which they have fought hand-tohand battles with strikers from Hull and Goole during the past Week.

About 35 policemen have been injured and more than 90 strikers arrested at the dock so far. In Guernsey, officials said they would continue for the tima being a tomato airlift to England's mainland. But shippers already were making plans to resuma normal shipments by boat The union secured improved job guarantees for dockworkers displaced by the trend toward use of containers for maritime shipping The settlement terms answer a key union demand hy assuring more un'se ing jobs at inland container depots to longshoremen. The jobs had been going to lower-paid truck drivers while dockers saw modern container handling methods cut the traditional labor force in the ports. Losses in London

In London alone the number of employed dockers has dropped from 24,000 to 14,000 in the last 10 years. The national total is expected to fall another 10,000 to 32,000 in the next three years. Strike settlement terms envision at least 200 more jobs at inland container depots going to dockers. In addition the scale of severance payments will go up to a maximum of f4,000.

"It's a scandalous decision," a Liverpool dock union leader said. "All we're getting in the settlement is 200 container jobs and losing 10,000 dockers' jobs. What an exchange!"

Cites Inflation Risks in Spending

Nixon Vetoes HEW and Labor Bills

By Stuart Auerbech WASHINGTON, Aug. 17 (WP).—President Nixon yesterday fulfilled his promise to veto the $30.50-billion spending bill the Departments of Labor and Health, Education and Welfare because it appropriated $1.8 billion more than he asked for.

He called the bill "a perfect example of the kind of reckless federal spending that just can-not be done without more taxes or more inflation, both of which I am determined to avoid."

While saying that his administration "is second to none in its concern for America's health, education and manpower needs, Mr. Nixon declared that problems of inflation have a greater priority. Bigher Priority

"No program has a higher priority than continued expansion of the purchasing power of all the people," Mr. Nixon said in an underlined portion of his veto message to Congress.

Hours later the House failed to muster the two-thirds majority necessary to neset the veto. The vote was 203 to 171 in favor of overriding, 47 short of the number needed. There will be no Senate vote.

The House and Senate Appropriations Committees will have another chance at the bill, and the Fresident made it clear that he would not accept "a slight reduction" in the spending amount. "Such action," he said, "would obviously not satisfy the objections to this measure [that] I have set forth here." Presidential news secretary Ron Ziegler refused to say how much more than the $28.7-billion he requested would be acceptable

Sen, Warren G. Magnuson, D., Wash., manager of the bill in the Senate, called the veto "a disgraceful example of terribly confused priorities."

Essential Money

"In this bill we are talking about absolutely essential money for cancer research, for bealth care in communities that now have no health care, for drugabuse education, for psychiatric research to ald troubled veterans of a war in Southeast Asia," Sen. Magnuson said. "This bill was not frivolous.

N.Y. Police Told by Mayor: 'Run Mobsters Out of Town'

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (AP) .--In the aftermath of the slaying of two innocent bystanders by gangland killers who mistook them for mobsters, New York City's 30,000-member Police Department, was under mandate from Mayor John V. Lindsay today to "run the mobsters out of town."

"Get out and stay out" was the message the mayor ordered police brass to relay to the city's five shadowy Cosa Nostra "families." which each range in size up to possibly 1.000 members.

"The recent murder of innocent citizens, allegedly the result of mistaten identity by gangland executioners, is an outrage which demands that the romanticization of the mob must be stopped and the gaugsters run out of town," Mr. Lindsay declared yesterday.

Manhattan District Attorney Frank S. The report listed an appendix glving a survey of selected countries and areas. These included:

Turkey

Turkey is the largest source of the raw material for the heroin sold on the American market. Turkish opium is preferred by heroin traffickers because the morphine content is one of the highest in the world, ranging from 9 to 14 percent. Because of this, legal prices for Turkey's oplum exports far surpass other countries'. The report detailed Turkey's decision to ban the legal production of opium, in the bope that this would also mean the end of the illegal production as well. Burma

Burma produces some 400 tons annually and is the largest single producer for overseas markets, The government does not regard the matter as serious and refuses participate in internaticaal control bodies. The Burmese traf-fic is controlled mostly by Chinese, many of them former members of Nationalist Chinese forces that retreated to Burma following the victory of the Communists in China. France was praised for increasing its attention to the drug problem, after long believing that publicity would only contribute to the spread of drugs. Jules Romains, 87, Author, Member of French Academy

PARIS, Aug. 17 (NYT).—Jules Romains, 87, the celebrated French man of letters, died in a Paris hospital Monday. News of his death, after a long and painful illness, was withheld until his burial today in Pere-Lachaise cemetery, tha resting place of many notable Frenchmen.

Mr. Romains's chief literary creation was "Men of Good Will." nne of the longest, most intricately designed and most majestic of modern novels.

Ranking with Balzac's "Comedie Humaine" Zola's Rougon-Macquert and Proust's "A la Recherche du Temps Perdu," "Les Hommes de Bonne Volonte" was vitten in 27 sections from 1931 to 1946. Its English version was published in the United States as "Men of Good Will," and it ran to 14 volumes with a intal of 6.400 pages.

Although "Men of Good Will"
was undoubtedly his master feat, Mr. Romains also enjoyed a considerable reputation as a play-wright, chiefly for his satirical comedy "Knock ou Le Triemphe de la Médecine," and fer his rhapsodic and philosophic poetry. His fecundity in these mediums, as in essays, was amazing.

Great Regret

"It is a source of great regret to me," he said toward the close of his life, 'that no one has ever valued my poetry higher."

His poetry, however graceful, was ealipsed by his jumbo nar-rative navel. "The idea of a vast novel, composed of a great num-ber of volumes, and in which I would try to present a sort of epic from the beginning of the 20th century all over the world. and especially in France . . . exist-cd lu my mind from earliest youth, from the very time when I began to write," he ouce ex-

Mr. Romains sat down to exeente his grand design when he was 45 years old, and late it he poured years of close observation of the French and European scene. He worked according to a plan laid out for monihs and even years alread. And whether he was in Paris, at his country home. traveling, or in exile in the United States, he turned out a daily He considered 10 typewritten pages in 10 bours an excellent output.

Started at Age 9

Having started to write at the age of 9 (a comedy in verse about divorces and being endowed with the ability to spin an engrossing story easily, he had no difficulty in completing two unpedded volumes a year. Although Mr. Romains was elected to the French Academy in 1946 and was extolled by André Malraux as "part of the houer of France," and although he was president of PEN, the luternational writers' organizatlon, from 1936 to 1939, he was not personall; popular with other writers. They found him standoffish, cold and unfriendly, a man who kept himself to himself. That be was a tightwad and that be was wont to brag about his accomplishments added to the disenchantment in which many beld him.

In the United States and Mexico, where he lived for much of World War II, his hoste and friends formed a less barsh impression. They coosidered him charming (when he wanted to be and a vivacious and witty conversationalist with a pleasant smile and a boisterous joke to recount: but vainglorious when it came to his writing. However, like Toknoy, the faults of the man were submerged by his power as a writer.

Mr. Romains was a short, massively built man with a high forehead, sky-colored, deep-set eyes and a strong chin. His torso was too large for his legs, and this gave him a startling appearance. In his youth, he was an athlete and a tireless explorer of Paris and the surrounding country. For years in his later life. be did all the heavy work on his form at Saint-Avertin, a village near Tours.

A French critic remarked on "the pure objectivity of his writing," and this may have come from his years as a teacher of philosophy and from the philoscohical strain evident in much of his work. Broadly, be almed at universal brotherhood, and unanimism, Some of his earliest thinking about this idea appeared in 1908 in a book of poems entitled "La Vie Unanime" ("Unanimistic Life". There poems expressed. in his words. "a new vision of human groups in themselves and not, as was most often the case before then, of the individual elements which compose them." In its most extended form, this philosophy underlies "Mon of Good Will," a sociological pageant that resembles nothing so much as a mille feuilles in its multiple layers of incident and meaning. On the surface, the novel spans 25 years of French and Western European; bistory. It opens nn an ordinary day in Paris. Oct. 6, 1908 and it concludes on another ordinary day there. Oct. 7, 1933.

Between these dates, the novel describes with clinical exactitude the decay and death of a whole civilization—the world that was sent reeling by World War I and that was creeping to its incluctahie doom in World War II. the likelihood of which was already foreshadowed in 1933 by the rise

In line with Mr. Romains's antiromanticism, "Men of Good Will" has neither heroes nor villains in the accepted sense. His people are shaped by enormously complex forces of history, and however much they may struggle they are in the end powerless to deflect those forces. Thus, there is more than a touch of irony in its Greek sense in the novel's title, for Mr. Romains's men of good will are bound by fate.

Jules Romains was born Louis Farigoule Aug. 26, 1885, at Saint-Julien Chapteull, but he passed his childhood in Paris, where his father was a teacher. A brilliant student, be was admitted to the Eccle Normale Superieure, where he took his degree in philosophy and science in 1909.

It was during this time that he published his first verse. "La Vie Unanime," and took his pen name. Evidently shy, he showed the poems by Romains to one of his professors for an opinion. When approval was forthcoming. he proudly announced that he was Jules Romains-a name that he used for all, but his scientific writing on extra retinal vision. Mr. Romains's literary fame rose to fresh acciaim after the war when be published the threevolume novel "Psyché" ("The Body's Rapture," in English) in which he handled sexual themes with a truly Gallic perceptiveness and delicacy.

He then turned his virtuesity to the theater, writing "Dr. Knock" in 1923. This is considered by some experts to be the best comedy in French in our time. The play, which has been staged all over the world, is a satire on medical quackery and human credulity. Dr. Knock's object in life is to put money into his purse, and this he succeeds in doing handscriely by persuading people that they are frightfully ill, or about to become so-a state that they also seem to enjoy. Two of his books were about the United States, "A Visit to the Americans" in 1936 and "Salsette Discovers America" in 1942. Both reflect his favorable impressions of this country, its people and their democratic way

Another book. "The Seren Mysterles of Europe." appeared in 1940, and it cast Mr. Romains in an ambiguous light, for it related in great detail how he had, in the late 1930s, attempted to avert World War II as an amateur ambassador of goodwill. What dismayed its readers was

Mr. Romains's account of his visits and of advice to King Leopold of the Belgians and to Nazi bigwigs, including Joachim von Ribbentrop and Otto Abetz clater ambassador to Vichy France). as well as to leaders of the French government, including Pierre Laval. Mr. Romains wrote himself as a male Cassandre, and his self-praise seemed excessive to the point of being a delusion of grandeur. However, much was remitted him during his war years in the United States and Mexico when he worked tirelessly for the Free French movement and when he strove to rally writers to the Allied cause by declaring that it

The imposition of a new schedule of fees for educated applicants, if put fully into practice, would be aimed not only at block-ing intellectuals who have already applied but at deterring others from applying in the future, Jewish sources sald.

U.S. Medicall Lets Physicians Phone for Specialists' Advice nationwide "dial - a - diagnosis" service is now available for physicians who encounter perplexing problems in their practices and need the advice of specialists.

The nonprofit service, named Medicall, is operated by the American Society of Contemporary Medicine and Surgery, a 3,000-member organization led by Dr. Michael DeBakey, the Houston heart surgeon. Medicall began operations a history that the Wright Brothers, in freeing man from the earth by powered flight, also wastly expanded his ability to harm himself. From the Taube of 1914 to the B-52 of 1972, the airplane has been a weapon of war. Increasingly now, it is becoming a wehicle of crime-ranging from hijackings for loot to (in Argentina) a jail-break and, in Morocco, the attempted assassination of King Hassan.

To be sure, much of this crime is assoclated with civil war. When a million in ransom was exacted for the American place recently flown to Algiers, the money was elaimed by the Black Panthers as munitions for their revolution. The opening of the jail in Rawson. Argentina, and the subsequeot hijacked flight to Chile, was the work of revolutionaries; so presumably was the attack on King Hassan's Boeing-727 and the strafing of the people at the airport.

This confusion between the peaceful purposes of man's implements and his abuse of them is as old as the first tool: The chipped rock that might get man his food or chop down a sapling for shelter could kill one of his fellows. The horse-friend and servant of man from early days_could carry him into battle. The wheel, that magnificent invention, enabled chariots to charge, as well as carts to carry grain and mills to grind it. The Congreve rocket lighted up Fort McHenry under siege, as rockets might signal a ship in distress—and

It is one of the well-expounded ironies of to press on further, to blast London with V-2s as well as land men on the moon.

But it is not practical to allow this confusion to dominate the law, metropolitan or international. When opponents of gun control in the Senate or elsewhere argue that it is men who kill men, not guns; when those who fight against strict international rules on hijacking point out that this crime can be committed for high motives as well as low, they evade the central issue that men use guns to kill, and that hijackere disrupt innocent traffic and endanger innocent lives. War is hell, to use a cliche that each generation apparently must learn anew, and aerial bombing has made it more hellish. There are moments in the life of every people when only civil war seems able to confront

Nevertheless, the whole history of human society has been an effort to regulate, if not, unfortunately, to abolish killing. And since killing by the rules is better than killing without any rules at all, the new threat posed to the comity of nations by unregulated use of the plane as a weapon needs more thought and swifter action than the nations have given it. The attempt on King Hassan's life seems relatively free from international complications (although both his passenger jet and the military craft which attacked it came from American factories), but that is unusual in crime in the air. Whatever the excuse-and there are all sorts of excuses for all sorts of offenses -air piracy is just that: The pirate is, in the old definition, the enemy of mankind.

Ripe for Imagination

recognizing the diminution of military danger in the Middle East, following the expulsion of Soviet advisers from Egypt. Defense Minister Dayan suggests that Israel is ready to act, not just talk, on the assumption that things are no longer what they used to be between Israel and its Arab neighbors. As such, his remarks in an Israel Radio interview seem a positive advance over Premier Meir's tentative assessment last month.

When Mrs. Meir spoke, Israel's intelligence chiefs were not certain how extensive the Soviet pullout would be, and the government chose to play safe in relying on their most cautious estimates. By now, Israel's leaders are reportedly satisfied that the Soviet withdrawal is indeed wide-ranging. Of more than 16,000 Soviet military men in Egypt a month ago, no more than 3,000 are still there, and the exodus is continuing.

The practical military impact of Mr. Dayan's announced decisions is not clear. He did not define the "redeployment" of his forces along the Soez Canal front, and the reduced level of routine reserve call-ups seems to have been in the works anyway. Nevertheless, symbolically, both Egypt and Israel appear to have reduced their concentration on the military options. The question now is whether either side will move to open any serious new political or diplomatic options.

Mr. Dayan relterated Israel's belief, shared by Secretary of State Rogers and United States diplomats, that a limited interim agreement along the Suez Canal cease-fire

Israel has now sent out a signal of line is the most promising avenue of approach right now. This is not a rigid plan. There is room for maneuver to overcome President Sadat's fear that a limited arrangement would freeze into a long-term truce, with Israel still in control of a large part of the Sinai Peninsula.

One of the superfluous complications in the current search for political options is the American election campaign. Mr. Sadat might well believe-certainly the Israelis are fearful of it-that after the votes are counted, any American administration would be ready to exert more pressure on Israfor political concessions than is possible during the campaign. On this reasoning, Cairo's continuing rebuffs to U.S. offers to act as go-between can be taken as shortterm posturing, a delaying action until the more favorable postelection season.

The tragedy would be to waste the political momentum generated by the sudden jolt to the military deadlock. A useful service would be rendered if peacemakers from the United States or the United Nations utilized this opportunity to compose a variety of specific procedural options toward achieving a Snez Canal arrangement or even a more elusive comprehensive settlement. The aim would be to give the parties a tempting array of negotiating channels, direct and indirect, secret and public, through which they could fashion their own agreements.

After two years of deadlock, the Middle East is ripe for new effort and new imagination this actumn. Without a fresh approach, even the lower military tensions will not jog the parties loose from the sterile rigidities of their past.

Ramsey Clark in Hanoi

Former Attorney General Ramsey Clark used poor judgment in publicly criticizing American war policies while on his factfinding mission to North Vietnam. For one so prominent in American governmental affairs to denounce U.S. actions in the capital of a nation with which this country is inyolved in combat was bound to detract from the humane course he hoped to advance.

Predictably, the ensuing political storm has all but obliterated the correctness of what Mr. Clark said as distinct from where he said it. The mass suffering caused to civilians on both sides of the DMZ by indiscriminate American air bombing justifies the anguish he volced. And it is unrealistic to deny that ending the war represents the surest way to free American prisoners of war. The sad part is not that Mr. Clark is speaking ont in protest now, but that he, like others who served in the Johnson cabinet, remained silent through all the yeare of escalation in Vietnam.

International Opinion

Israel and Its Arabs

Israel's relations with its Arabs will become more problematic in foture. Demographic projections have shown that, even allowing for immigration, Arabs will constitute 43 percent of the population in 1990 if the occupied territories are retained. The difference in rates of reproduction works against the Jewish proportion. Without the occupled territories Arabs will form only 2 percent of the population by 1990. In the former eventuality the Jewish nature of the state will be called in question, and with it will come the accusation of discriminationraised already in the cases of Berem and Ikrit. It is an accusation which cannot be deflected by the plea of security.

For God and Mr. Nixon

By William V. Shannon

WASHINGTON.—The Nixon administration's lengthy and assiduous courtship of Roman Catholic voters is one of the remarkable features of the political scene. The latest gesture was its endorsement of a Democrat-sponsored bill to giva a $200 tax credit to parents of children in parochial and private

A year ago this month, President Nixon told the Knights of Columbus in New York: "In your fight to save your schools, you can count on my support,".

On April 10, he went to Philadelphia to repeat that pledge to the National Catholic Educational Association's annual convention. Financial help for parents of children in church-related schools -83 percent of such children are in Catholic schools-is only one of the administration's many pro-

Catholic moves. Consider these other items: Two weeks ago, the administratioo announced that 41 private schools and colleges damaged by tropical storm Agnes would receive money from the President's disaster relief fund to pay for their reconstruction. seven of them are Catholic primary and secondary schools. Abortion Issue

Two years ago, the President appointed John D. Rockefeller 3d and 23 other distinguished citizens to serve on a commission on population growth and the American future. When the commission finished its work on May 5, the President issued a statement rejecting much of its report. "I consider abortion an unacceptable form of population control... I do not support the unrestricted distribution of family planning services and devices to minors," he declared,

When repeal of New York's permissive abortion statute was pending before the state legislature, the President intervened on the anti-abortion side with a public letter to Terence Cardinal Cooke of the Archdiocese of New President Nixon has Henry Cabot Lodge, his 1960 running mate, in Rome as his personal envoy to the Vatican, and has retained a Jesuit priest on his White House staff.

Viewing these actions, Democratic politicians shake their heads in envy. As one of them remarked the other day, "Nixon doing things Jack Kennedy could never have dreamed of trying. Can you imagine the uproar if Kennedy had come out for parochial school aid or put a Jesuit on his staff or sent that abortion letter to the cardinal?" Matthew Troy, the Queens County Democratic chairman in New York City, wisecracked recently: "Nixon's done everything except say mass."

The Catholic community is not a political monolith. A substantial majority of Catholics, however, used to vote Democratic. Beginning in the late 1930s during the controversy over the Spanish civil war, the minority of Catholics voting Republican grew appreciably. General Eisenbower in his two campaigns made further inroads.

In 1960, however, the Democratic vote among Catholics rose sharply when John F. Kennedy was the candidate. It stayed high in 1964, perhaps because President Johnson was seen as carrying on the Kennedy policies, and again in 1968, partly because Sen. Edmund S. Muskle, a Catholic, was the Democratic vice-presidential nominee. In choosing first Sen. Eagleton and then Sargent Shriver for vice-president. Sen. McGovern also picked a Catholic running mate. President Nixon, like a fair number of other non-Catholics, undoubtedly opposes abortion and favors aid to church-related schools on philosophical grounds. There is nothing unusual in the hope of Republican political strategists to translate these positions into additional Catholic

When the President's gestures are closely examined, however, they are all curiously insubstan tial. Although he retains Ambassador Lodge in Vatican City, for example, the President com-pletely disregards. Pope Paul's urgent pleas to end the Vietnam war and to stop the killing and the creation of new refugees, What do Lodge and His Holiness talk about in their occasional conversations?

Nizon's opposition to abortion is symbolic and has little practical effect. Abortion is an issue decided not by the federal government but by the states, as Gov. Nelson A. Rockfeller of New York demonstrated when he vetoed abortion repeal despite Nixon's public letter,

Although a strong argument can be made for federal aid to church schools, a $200 tax credit is not going to save foundering parochial schools. Since the average cost of educating a child is $930 a year, a credit would have to be three to four times larger than what the President has endorsed to be of decisive help to hard-pressed

Catholic parents, Will any of this money actually be forthcoming? Casper Weinberger; the budget director, warned the Ways and Means Committee that since the administration wants no tax increase and a rigid budget ceiling, any help for parochial school parents should be financed by cutting existing federal aid to public schools. Put in those terms, the bill could set off the kind of parochial school vs. public school donnybrook that killed federal

BEIGRADE. From the standpoint of the American international position, I believe the very best outcome of this year's U.S. election would be the renewal of Richard Nixon's mandate for another four years in a camnaign which allowed Sargent Shriver to gain a national stature sufficient to enable him to run as the principal Democratic candidate to 1976

Shriver has not yet made his mark but an energetic, intelligent and compassionate man, he is in soms respects the best endowed of any of the Kennedy clan for the highest office in the United States, even though he has yet to persuade the public. He is running as No. 2 this time on ticket hampered by some strange concepts of how diplomatic and defense policy should be elaborated, but he now has a chance for widespread exposure. Shriver's eventual prospects are, however, of less present importance than the immediate prospects of Nixon and most Americans would be astonished at the alarm occasioned in a broad spectrum of opinion overseas at the long-shot chance that George McGovern might win the November vote and proceed to honor some of the promises he

This opinion is by no means limited to right-wing governments, as in Spain or Greece, or to Asian states with which we are linked, such as South Vietnam or Thailand. It is fervently held in NATO; it is a matter of utmost concern in Israel; and it is endorsed in many left-wing circles which fear that the global power belance might be disastrously tilted should anything approaching McGovern's foreign and defense pledges become the basis for American policy.

As but one example I cite the opinion of Milovan Dillas, former second man in Communist Yugoslavia's hierarchy who is now on the outs with Marshal Tito but who is a profound thinker on political matters and with much experience abroad. Djilss told

"President Nixon's trips to Peking and Moscow represented a very impressive historical act. They showed that Nixon understands what Communism is. President Johnson played on the conflict between the Russians and the Chinese. That is a classical kind of policy. But Nixon saw that it would be better to have good relations with both of them while at the same time remaining strong. He knows you can't afford to be weak."

Why the U.S. Won

The big event of the past four ers, according to Dillas, is that the Americans have demonstrably proven they won the cold war and this has altered the entire world picture. He doesn't like the Vietnam conflict and cones he has never felt a personal sympathy for Nixon, based on what he has read of him, but he thinks Nixon fully understands foreign policy requirements

"The United States won the cold war." he ressons, "because of the internal disintegration of Communism Because you remained sizong you were able to accelerate this inevitable process. Nixon's Peking and Moscow trips were a result. But the U.S. should neither overestimate nor underestimate that victory. You won because you are a nomideological country and thus were able to avoid a stalemate like that which prevailed between Christianity and Islam after their wars, a victory for neither side. "The New Left and those influenced by it think the U.S. is racked by crisis, but the so-called crisis in American society is largely imaginary. Race and class and generation gaps do exist but there is no fundamental crisis. The crises you have are aspects of the difficulty of adjusting to the electronic and econological revolutions of our "But you have emerged stronger on the world scene because the Communist world divided into factions while, at the same time, the United States succeeded in enlarging some of the basic democratic ideas-like individual human rights—thus helping to erode the Communist system. "And economically, you succeeded in pressing the Marxist world into collaboration with you. You proved the truth of your theory, that no economic system can develop isolated from others. And you stayed strong enough.

It is interesting that, although this analysis comes from a Marxist heretic, it resembles similar statements I have heard in various Western European countries, often from foreign observers who habitually preferred Democratic presidents in the United States.

They feel Nixon is in line with the traditional postwar American outlook and they are scared of what McGovern might be tempted to do because of verbal commitments already made.

companionship and kidnap

A few of its episodes—such as that in which the youth's society mother seeks to find him a suitable mate-are mildly diverting, but the script's mixture of the macabre and the maudin results in a tasteless stew. Bud Cort as the worl weary adolescent resembles a teen-aged Peter Lorre as he peers about with sinister glance for fresh means of self-destruction. But this hippie Halloween is enlightened by the presence of Ruth Gordon. who shines diamond-like in the surrounding gloom. Hers is a commanding characterization, moving, tender, sometimes impishly merry. Beneath its grotesque surface there : the pow-erful tug of authentic tragedy.

"Les Males" (at the Saint-André-des-Arts) is from Canada and is spoken in Canadian French, which falls rather disconcertingly on the ears in the manner of the hillbilly twans: It is a fairly spirited and enterlaining comedy about two men who, disillusioned by modern civilization, take to the woods to live as semi-savages. A menage-a-trois is established quickly, but one nf the men !: comes jealous of his comrade and the fair one departs to restore their brotherly harmony. "Les Males" provides a pleasant hour and a half, though sometimes, like its principals, it wanders without much purpose. Riding on the coattails of Pasolini's "Decameron" of last year comes "Decameron II" (at the Arlequin in Italian with French subtitles). This second helping of Boccaccio contains six stories related by Florentine young people as they sit out the plague in a mountain castle retreat. Directed by Mino Guerrini, the sequel has none of its forerunner's artistry and charm. The tales, of course, are better than any that a Ho'lywood hack could turn out, but their treatment and interpretation are crude, scarcely above the level of the routine semi-porno flick-

Buck. a black ex-soldier of the Civil War battlefields. is leading a caravan of freed slaves from Louisiana through Indian territory to the promised land of the rirgin West. Some Southern badmen make things tough for this enterprise and he turns Robin Hood bank robber to finance the project. He is encumbered by the aid of a dubious black preacher who proves more than one might suspect. and the Indians, too, turn out to be most obliging. There is some originality to the screenplay, but it has been treated with a heavy hand. The film is far too long and often dull. Sidney Poitier plays Buck intelligently but slowly and Harry Belafonte is the

Trying to Measure Psychic Energy

By Harry Nelson

OS ANGELES -- Russian scientists claim to have recorded evidence of a strange energy force existing between a mother and her -offspring.

At the University of California at Los Angeles, Neuropsychiatric Institute researchers have taken scores of photographs of mysterious coronas that seem to ebb and flow around a faith healer's

A Stanford University scientist speaks of "a new type of energy that could not be detected be-

Psychic surgery-surgery with-out benefit of scalpel or anesthesia or trace of a scar—may not be fakery, some serious - minded people helieve. Dr. Thelma Moss, a psychologist, and Dr. Marshall Barshay, kidney specialist, both from Los Angeles, are studying the reported powers of persons who claim to care illness by "laying on of Healing powers, according to many practitioners, are due to an electrical force within the healer's body which can be transmitted to the ill person.

Energy Forces Health, according to these views, exists when "energy forces" existing within every individual achieve a proper balance. Iliness is a disruption of these forces. Healing achieves its purpose when the belance of forces in the patient is restored by the healer's reservoir of electrical energy-something like recharging a dead battery, the thinking goes. Dr. Moss, an authority on psy-chic (PSI) phenomena, last year visited the laboratory of Dr. V. I.

Injushin at the University of Kasakh in the Soviet Union. Dr. Inyushin is one of the pioneers in a technique called Kir-lian photography. No camera or lens is used. Instead the object to be photographed is placed on a piece of film and the film is exposed by a pulsed electrical discharge passed through the object. The resulting photographs are sometimes striking Most objects, even inanimate ones, display a brightly colored corona around their edges, In-ternal patterns are sometimes visible, especially in leaves. Each species of leaf appears to have its characteristic pattern, according to Dr. Moss and Ken Johnson, a colleague.

One series of three photos shows a leaf that has been freshly plucked, the same leaf after a hole has been nunched in it and the leaf a few minutes after a psychic healer has passed his hand over the punched hole.

While the second photo in the series plainly shows a gaping black hole, the hole appears to have undergone changes following the ministrations of the healer. Dr. Moss has shown special interest in photographing the finger pads of healers. While Kirlian photos of the finger pads of most people display a corona, the coromas of some healers appear to be extra wide.

After a healing session, however, Dr. Moss says the healer's corones are significantly narrow-that it is through an energy syser, while those of the patient become appreciably larger, Some Russian researchers, who

American experts say are more advanced in PSI research, call the coronas "bioplasma" and be-lieve it to be the energy force which makes possible extrasensory perception and psychokinesis, the ability to move an object by willing it to move

The Russians also believe bioplasma is related to the points cattered throughout the body at which acupuncture needles are inserted. According to this view the benefits of acupuncture result from bioplasma electrical fields. This is in contrast with the American explanation which involves the nervous system and conventional concepts of nerve trans-

Dr. William A. Tiller, chairman of the department of material science at Stanford, told a recent meeting of parapsychologists at Palo Alto, Calif., about receou Russian efforts to measure "psychic energy."

In one experiment the Russians showed there are paths on the surface of the body along which electrical resistance is lower than for adjacent areas. These paths, which Dr. Tiller said correspond to what the Chinese call meridians, connect points in the body which are tha same as the acupuncture points where needles are placed to treat illnesses.

In another Russian study, newborn rabbits were taken under the sea in a submarine while the mother was left ashore hooked to an electroencephalograph. As the young rabbits were killed one by one there was a characteristic response in the mother's brain waves, Dr. Tiller said. This, he said indicates not only that there is some kind of a link between mother and offspring but tem other than the one represented by the electromagnetic spectrum used by conventional communication systems.

Several rears ago it became apparent that many of the so-called involuntary functions of the body -heart rate, blood pressure and brainwave frequency, for example -could be controlled voluntarily.

Although vogis have been manipulating internal states for centuries, it was not until scientists began applying that engineering principle of feedback to the human system that the potential of biofeedback for health purposes became apparent. Blofeedback involves using instruments to measure and present to the person some physiological process of which he normally is unaware. Two examples are muscie tension and brainwaves.

Watching Tension Suppose a person wishes to reduce his tensions because of a related high blood pressure or migraine headache problem, Sitting quietly in a room relaxing while attached to an instrument that measures muscle tension, the person can literally see his tension diminish .

By receiving instant visual feedback the person can learn what state of mind or body position or other behavior best produces the desired result.

Already scores of scientists engaged in bloteedback research have shown its potential for regulating erratic beart rhythms, lowering blood pressure and preventing migraines. Others are checking whether it can be used to control pain, teach military subjects to remain alert while watchlng radar screens and centrol the flow of stomach acid in ulcer

Publishers to Issue Version Of 'Lady Chatterley's Lover'

rent version of D. H. Lawrence's controversial novel "Lady Chatterley's Lover" will be published for the first time in England and the United States later this month, 45 years after it was written.

To be entitled "John Thomas and Lady Jane," it has been prepared for publication by Roland Grant, editorial director of William Hememann, Ltd., the London publisher who will assue the book on Aug. 29. An American edition will be published simultaneously by the Viking Press.

Malcolm Cowley, the American critic who has seen the manuscript, indicated that he preferred it over the final version. "It has a greet deal more material of social interest, more class feeling, and I think in some ways I like it better." he said in an interview. But other experts still prefer 'Lady Chatterley's

NEW YORK (NYT). - An ear- Jane," which actually is the seclier and substantially differ- cond draft of the novel, was completed in the summer of 1927. Six months later, Lawrence reworked it into what is known as "Lady Chatterley's Lover." changing some of its characters and writing a completely different ending. The first draft had been completed in February, 1927.

Publication of "John Thomas," in effect, completes one of the most furbulent episodes in publishing history. Publication of "Lady Chatterley's Lover" was marked by fierce debates over the novel's explicit descriptions of sex. widespread piracy, and a series of court battles over its erotic content.

The first unexpurgated edition of "Lady Chatterley's Lover" was published in America by Grove Press in 1959 but the government moved to bar it from the mails as "obscene" and "a filthy work." The order was overturned in what the literary community hailed as a landmark decision against literary censor-

A 'Belle Hélène' for Actors

By Paul Moor (IHT).-Eight years ago, on the 100th anniversary of the world première of Jacques Offenbach's smash-hit operetta "La Belle Helène," two bright young men in East Berlin marked the occasion in an unorthodox way. Peter Hacks. Ph D. born in West Germany and who had shown the unusual courage of his political convictions by moving to East Berlin, took the original Mellhac-Halévy libretto tions, especially those with a of "La Belie Hélène" and adapted it into what he termed "an eatirical beni, invariably attract eager scouts from West Berlin operetta for actors." Benno Besson, who in Zurich had fallen under the spell of Bertolt Brecht during his way-stop between the House Committee on Un-American Activitica and the Berliner Ensemble and who then had followed his mentor to East Berlin, staged it in the Kammerspicle, a miniature jewel of a theater. What Germans call die Erolik figures in this production to an extent unusual for the sexually rather prim German Democratic Republic. Concert Series in a Reclaimed Ghost Town

By William Weaver many walls in Tuscan cities recently a black-and-white poster has been attracting attention. It shows a medieval square, obviously the heart of an ancient castlevillage, and bears the legend: "Cennina da salvare" (Cennina must be saved). Very few peo-ole, even dyed-in-the-wool Tuscans, were aware that a place call Cennina existed, still less that it has to be saved.

It does exist: a tiny cluster of houses, with the impressive ruins of the castle, on top of a high hill in the lovely valley of the Ambra, between Florence and Arezzo, a green and wooded section of the province that is off the main reads and generally neglected by tourists. But a few years ago, an enterprising Italian artist, Osvaldo Right, came upon Cennina the discovered it on foot, because there was no road up to the castle then, and decided to bring the ghost town back to life. Single-handed, be bas forced the local authorities to build a road, he has prised money loose from the government for the restoration of the castle, he has brought friends to live in the once-abandoned houses, and has created a kind of cottage-industry and arts center, which produces very handsome ceramics.

This summer's program at Cennina-publicized by the striking poster-includes a summerlong one-man show of the painter Gianni Fanello, and an intelligent series of concerts, 'A typical one, last weekend was devoted to works for string orchestra, it was a complete success: great music, beautifully in remarkable surmundines.

The music was by Purcell, Tortini, Bach and Mozart. The players were a dozen students and young teachers from the nearby Accademia Chigiana in Siena, The soloists were the distinguished Italian violinist Franco Gulli iteaching at the Chigiana this summer: and his assistant Jean Piguet, a member of the Zurich Chamber Orchestra The ensemble playing was of the highest order, especially notable in the Mozart D major Directimento (E. 136). Gulli shone in the Tartini D minor Concerto, and Piguet joined him for a lyrical performance of the Bach Concerto for two violins in D minor. The surroundings were a big part of the pleasure. Cennina still has no electricity. Torobes lighted the way to the castle, and in a high, vaulted room, still only half-restored, the audience stood like the players; or sprawled on the clean straw scattered over the dirt floor, Only the music broke the silence: that rare silence without TV or motor-scooters.

BOAC in the Red LONDON, Aug. 17 (Reuters) --Britain's biggest sirline, British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC), reported a financial loss today for the first time in eight years and said the cost of beating hijackers was partly to blame. The airline reported a loss of £1.4 million for the year ended March 21, despite an 8.3 percent rise in revenues to 1211.7 million; BOAC has only had one big hijacking-the case of the Arab guerrillas who took over a VC-10 let in 1970. But its precautions against suffering a repeat performance have since cost a steady fi million a year.

Other reasons accounting for the deficit, BOAC said, were the growth of rival charter busines and the British government's transfer of lucrative routes to. private enterprisa:

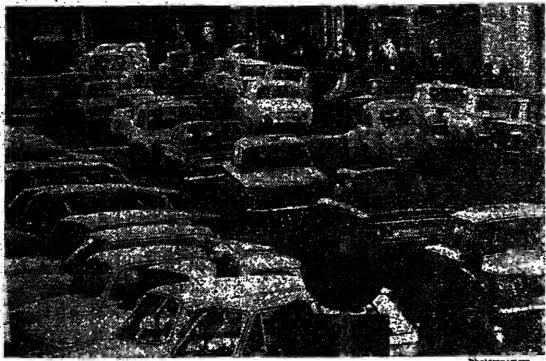

For all this, said BOAC, it made of £2 million. But this was transformed into a deficit largely on account of the dividend demanded by its only shareholder—the British government emounting to £3.25 million.

When added to other nonoperating costs, this meant that BOAC had to draw some £1.8 million from its reserves, chairman Keith Granville, said. He stressed that this still left BOAC with a comfortable 277 million in

On prospects for next year, he said the chances were for little better than break-even. Geisenberg Operating at Loss

Yugoslav Communism Caters to Consumer

By Raymond H. Anderson RELGRADE, Aug. 17 (NYT) .--In Yugoslavia's variation of Marxism, which risks being termed credit-card Communism by some wag now that the Diners' Club is enrolling members here, the consumer is king. His needs, tastes and whims guide much of the country's economic activity.

Travelers arriving bers from more orthodox Communist comtries such as the Soviet Union or Bulgaria, where the consumers' well-being is still subordi-nated to state investments for basic economic development, tend to react with astonishment.

Streets and highways in Yugoslavia are crowded with private entomobiles, and pedestrians must find a path among cars lined up for blocks.

Well-decorated stores are filled with goods of all descriptions, imported as well as domestically produced. . Reforms permitting privete ownership of restaurants, imms, small shops and other facilities have contributed greatly to a brightening of life in Yugoslavia. Active competition for the con-sumers' dinars is reflected in the quality of products and service, well as in advertising in the press and on television. As the Yugoslavs prosper in consumer - oriented economy, many are building second homes in the countryside, often Swiss-style chalets, and traveling abroad for holidays or to find spare parts for their cars. Last year, statistically, one of every two Yugoslava went abroad, mainly to Italy or Austria. About 3,000 Diners' Club membership cards are reported to have been issued in Yuguslavia by a travel agency in Zagreb, capital of the Republic of Croatia.

The tern in favor of the con-sumers was undertaken in 1965 under a reform program shifting resources from investments personal consumption. The objective was not only to raise living standards but also to give workers more incentive to raise productivity and to lower production costs. An abundance of consumer goods was essential to provide the incentive to work harder and earn more money.

The results have been striking for city dwellers, the main benefictories of the reform. In 1956, fewer than one percent of urbanhouseholds had a refrigerator. Last year, refrigerators were to be found in nearly half the honseholds.

A quarter of all families now have a washing machine. Only 15 years ago it was a fraction of one percent. Equally impressive achievements have been made in cars, television sets, electric kitchen stoves and other appliances.

But an accompanying steep rate of inflation has aroused uncertainty and debate. Skeptics are questioning official statistics that show wages rising at a faster rate than prices, which ostensibly were frozen late last year but which have climbed 16 percent so far this year.

"Everything can be proven by figures -even quite opposite things -if considered from opposite angles," complained Borbs, the organ of the Socialist Alliance of Working People.

The newspaper noted that the Federal Bureau of Statistics had reported that while the cost of living was up 16 percent, average carnings had risen 21 percent, giving a 5 percent increase in real

Indicating its doubts, Borba commentea:

"If, for instance, we compare this year's first five-month period with the same period of 1971, we will see that real earnings were higher. But if we compare the same period with the second half of 1971, we will obtain quite a different picture. And the conclusion will be that earnings are really stagnating." The situation is so vexing that some Yugoslavs have been heard to express preference for the system of rigidly controlled prices imposed in the Soviet Union, a country otherwise little praised in Yugoslavia. Even with the 21 percent wage increase so far this year, average earnings in Yugoslavia are not yet up to the level of Western Sprope. The average wage naof $100.

The rate of "real" growth was 9.4 percent, and the rate of inflation was a comfortable 18 per-The department also said that pre-tax corporate profits rose 5.6 percent over the quarter, to a record annual rate of $93.1

The real growth-which discounts increases due to higher profits-and inflation rates were revisions of estimates published a month ago in the department's preliminary assessment of the quarter's gross national product. The earlier growth estimate was 8.9 percent and the estimated inflation rate was 2.1 percent.

The GNP-the market value produced-is the most comprehensive indicator of the state of the economy. The administration's goal, set last January, was a real growth rate of 6 percent and an inflation factor of about 3.5 percent. The White House thought it needed that great a rate of real expansion to generate

The rate of "real" growth in the economy was also 9.4 percent in the fourth quarter of 1965. The last time it was higher was in the second quarter of 1959, when it was 10 percent.

The 1.8 percent rate of infla-tion was also the lowest since the fourth quarter of 1965, except for the 1.5 percent in the fourth quarter of last year, during the wage-price freeze.

The administration was somewhat defensive in greeting the news that profits were up again the White House of being too kind to business. Assistant Commerce Secretary Harold C. Passer noted that "profits fluctuate widely over the business cycle," and are expected to rise "strongly in the initial stages of an economic expansion" of the sort that the country is in now.

GM Reduces Price Request For '73 Autos

Chrysler, AMC Hold To Original Schedule

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.— General Motors yielding to White House pressure, said today that it was frimming its proposed $90 increase in the price of 1973 model passenger care to $69.

The other three domestic car mamulacturers, American Mo-tors, Chrysler and Ford, were expected to make similar reductions, Because General Motors has more than hal' the domestic car market, the other companies have found it difficult to resist GM's leadership in pricing.

The GM concession was communicated to the White House in a letter from Richard C. Gerstenberg, chairman, to Donald Rumsfeld, director of the Cost of Living Council.

Although GM gave the administration a measure of victory in lts campaign to hold the price line on new cars, Mr. Gerstenberg hinted that the corporation would epply to the Price Commission for additional increases before the end of the year.

Chrysler, in a telegram to Mr. Rumsfeld, reiterated a position it took yesterday in a public statement-that it would not voluntarily reduce its proposed $91 price rise, to which it said it was entitled because of increased costs. American Motors sent Mr.

Rumsfeld e similar message. Including Ford, which has sought and received e delay in responding to the request, the companies have proposed boosts on their fall models to account for the increased costs of federally mandated antipollution and safety devices. In addition, AMC requested another boost to cover other cost increases.

AMC indicated it would be willing to push off the additional increase request, but said it needed to pass through to consumers the cost of the safety and pollution devices.

GM also said there was a "serious question of principle" involved in the request that it withdraw its price increase.

"We believe the workings of our economy are endangered when one agency of government can establish standards that e menufacturer's product must meet, and another seency should prevent the same manufacturer from baving at least an opportunity to recover the costs of such mandated equipment in the marketplace under competitive conditions.

"Moreover, we are concerned with the precedent that might be

NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (NYT).-Weakness in airline and electrical equipment groups and strength in farm machinery issue: were among features of the New York Stock Exchange today.

The Dow Jones industrial average, posting its third moderate decline in a row, slipped 2.86 to 961.39

Utility stocks, which have dis-played a firmer tone in recent sessions, continued to edge ahead. On the plus side, Deere rose 2 7/8 to 72 3/8, after reporting a sharp increase in quarterly profits. It posted a yearly high at 73.

International Harvester, also trading at its 1972 high during the session, added 3/4 to 34 7.8. Harvester showed a 93 percent quarter.

gain in earnings for its latest A pair of declining stocks on the active list summed up the performance of the airlines. TWA, the volume leader, fell 1 3/8 to 48 1/8, after plummeting 4 1/8 yesterday. Continental declined 1 3/8 to 20 5/8 in brisk trading.

The general weakness among airline issues stemmed, at least in part, from reports that one brokerage house with an institutional following believes that July net income for TWA-due for release next week-may be lower than expected. However, other Wall Street sources maintained today that such an assumption in regard to TWA's latest monthly profits probably is wrong. The two largest point losers among the 30 Dow components

As the diagramed deal demonstrates, the right strategy for a declarer in three no-trump who is a trick or two short of his contract may be to lead the opponents' suit back at them, hoping that one defender will cash tricks and thereby embarrass his partner.

North and South were using the Roth Club, in which one diamond is a positive response to the strong one club rather than a negative. One no-trump showed some modest values short of a positive response, and South persevered to game when North raised.

A passive lead would have been best for the defense. A spade lead would have established that suit for the defense without giving anything away. A diamond lead would also have been unhelpful to the declarer, and in either case South would probably have finished down Even after the normal attacking heart lead, which gives South an eighth trick, it might seem that eight tricks would be tion to his environment really stience alone was a amounts to something more than a failure of technological nerve, sentimental longing for the wilderness frontier, or a vestigial spasm of 19th-century Romanticism, then it ought to be clear by now that the crisis is not going to be ferestailed by mere mass cigarette-butt police-ups, gasolines of lower lead content or a global remunciation of elec-tric shoe-polishers. What we need to begin with is not a shopping list of do's and don't's, but fundamental analyses of how we reached our present impasse snalyses on the order of historian Lynn While's provocative assertion, which he first ad-vanced in a lecture to the American Association for the Advancement of Science in 1966, that the ecological crisis can be traced to sititudes toward nature which are deeply grounded in Christian words, is a set of questions that address assumptions we had forgotten (or never knew) we were

Such a set of questions is what William Leiss—an American-born political-science teacher at the University of Saskatchewan, Regina campus—has provided us with in his brilliant but intellectually knotly "The Domination of Nature"—an attempt, as he puts it, "to trace the origins, development, and social consequences of an idea found everywhere in modern thought"-namely the idea of the "domination," "control," or "conquest" of nature as a prerequisite for mankind's well-

Devoting the first half of his study to the historical perspective. of the idea, Mr. Leiss surveys the evolution of man's attitudes toward nature from primitive times, when the feelings of superiority to nature, "engendered by the use of tools," aroused a concomitant need to placate the spirits of the earth, to the present era, when at least until recently "mastery of nature" has been assumed unquestioningly to be our first order of business. Leiss fixes as the crucial point of transition in Western civiliza-ton the breaking up of the Medieval religious and social order and the end of the time when "the notion of man as lord of the earth was interpreted in the context of a wider chical framework." Science was then freed to bestride the earth and mount the throne that Francis Becon's writings provided. In the historical process, Leiss asserts mastery of nature has wedded its fortunes to those of science, and every success was regarded ipso facto as a further validation of the idea." What was not un-derstood, Leiss suggests, was that science was nothing more than a "Tork Times."

By Dave Anderson NEW YORK, Aug. 17 (NYT)-Henry Asron sounded annoyed as he discussed his quest to scale Babe Ruth's home run record. "I understand," he said sharply. "that a National League manager is going around making bets that I won't break it. I know who

You just did. Henry, assuming that Bowle Kuhn is interested in preserving the integrity of the quest:

enced by his bet to order Aaron walked intentionally, even to order that he be plunked in the ribs, possibly injuring him seriously. Aaron's : annoyance Was understandable as he hunched in the back seat of a beige convertible driven by Worth McKellar, e longtime friend, in the ride to Shea Stadium where the Atlanta Braves would oppose the New York Mets in a night game. By nature, he is e private man. Swing the bat. Let the homa runs accumplate. Nn pomp. No ceremony. Not even a hotel suite when the

Braves travel. 'No Prima Donna ... 'He just asks for a big single room," says Donald Davidson, the Braves' traveling secretary. "He's not a prima donna." He hasn't had a roommate since Bill Bruton was with the Braves, several years ago. But he has an invisible roommate now. He lives with the memory of Babe Ruth, which intrudes on him continually. At the age of 38, he has 664 home runs. He needs 50 to tie the Babe's record. If he remains healthy, he could break the record late next season, or early in the 1974 season. But not everybody is rooting for him.

"At first, all the talk bugged ma," he was saying, rining in Manhattan traffic. "But now it's like waking up and having breakfast, it's part of my day. People are always wishing me luck, but I don't know if all of them really mean it. My mail is 60-40 for me to stay healthy and break it, but some people think that bscause he had about 3,000 fewer at-bats than I will, that I wouldn't really be breaking his record."

An Acceptance

He appeared to eccept the rebuke philosophically, but he acknowledged only e casual awareness of Ruth's career. "I know he hit 714 home runs.

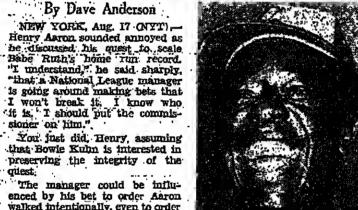

somebody reminds me of that every day," he said, smiling. "T've always said that the man had to be an incredible ballplayer to do what he did. Especially when you see pictures of the pot belly he had. And he must ve been a great pitcher, too. The man had to be an incredible ballplayer to do what he did as a pitcher and then as a home-run hitter. He's a legend, And he'll stay e legend. Nobody's trying to crase that.

"But when people ask me if I want to break his record, I'd be talling a lie if I said Do. I tell 'em it's a target for me. And if I do break it. I'd like people to understand that I hope my record wouldn't last that long, that somebody else would think I can hit 35 this season. then I'd need 40 next season to tie it. I've got to stay healthy, and I've got to have e great hitter behind me in the batting order.

Walked 3 Times

"Like the other night against the Reds, they had a big lead and they walked ma three times. They weren't going to give me anything good to hit. If the guy behind me isn't hitting, tha other team can pitch around me. But no matter what, I've got to be patient with myself. I've got to get e good pitch to hit. I start swinging at bad pitches, I'm in trouble. And if the 714th ever happens, it'll come off a real good pitcher. "At that stage the pitcher will have to be some guy with guts enough to challenge me with his best pitch. It won't be a rookie and it won't be a borderline guy. I'll never see a good pitch from anybody like that if it comes down to needing one for 714, be-cause none of them would want to be remembered as the guy who threw me the pitch. It'll be somebody like Seaver or Jenkins or Gibson or Carlton, somebody not efraid to throw his best nitch.

Now, after a lifetime of privacy. he is approaching the public pressure of sport's most dramatic countdown.

"I'm told that NBC will interrupt its TV programs every time I come up if I ever get close to the record, or to where I can break it. But thet won't bother me. Once I'm involved in a ball game, I don't think about the TV cameras, I don't even hear the people hollering. I've got a deaf ear."

Except when he beard ebout the rival manager who's betting against him.

U.S. Olympic Training For Sprinters Is Spiked

By Bernard Kirsch

MUNICH, Aug. 17 (IHT) .- At student equaled the world record one time, in order to beat U.S. sprinters, it was best to nail their spikes into the track. A hammer blow in that direction was struck

No one is sure what-if anvthing-and who can stop the U.S. domination of the shorter races. Magazines and newspapers, previewing the Olympics, have cited a lack of international competition, said to hurt the Americans, but it won't hurt as much as stepping on a nail, an ermy of which raised their dull heads above the artificial track where the U.S. team was training today.

Each of the Olympic squads, preparing here for the Games which open Aug. 26, has been given an area for training, and when the Americans arrived at the Poststadion, nutside the Olympic grounds, coach Stan Wright was told to keep his speedsters off the nail-covered track and on the grass. Workers were drawing white lines for some future, unimportant event. What could come ahead of training for Olympic heights?

A Survey Made

After taking a survey of a fairly nailless, and workerless area of the track, 200-meter man Larry Black and a teammate set down a starting block, and planned to work on relaxing in the get-set position while waiting for the long Olympic countdown to "Go." It meant running ebout five yards, and the exercise lasted only about 50 seconds when a group of men wearing powderblue jackets and white pants, the official Olympic uniform, roared on to the track and began to discuss—right in back of the starting blocks-what to do with these people disobeying orders.

"Hey come on, tell them to keep quiet," said an American, "We can't give the starting orders." "How do you say keep down in German," said another.

"Try shush," he was answered. But the men from the Olympic organizing committee had the next word, and unpolitically asked all to leave because there was work to be done. Wright politi-cally said his boys were finished using the track and didn't need it, and anyway, the serious practice doesn't start until next week. and so ended the episode, with everyone apologizing to the Amer-

IOC Firm as Two More Nations Quit Olympics

MUNICH, Aug. 17,-Amid continuing defections from the Olympic Games by African nations protesting the presence of e Rhodesian team, the International Olympic Committee and the West German organizers of the Games stood firm today in their resolve to retain the Rhodesian contingent for the competition.

Willi Daume, president of the organizing committee and head of the West German Olympic Committee, sald today "he had no reason" to believe the IOC would bow to pressure by the nations threatening the boycott. Yesterday, IOC president Avery Brundage reassimmed that the IOC would not recant on its promise to let Rhodesia compate under its old name of Southern Rhodesia, when it was a British colony.

Mali and Upper Volta sald they would withdraw from the Games. In an annumcement today at Ouagadougou, Upper Volta, Foreign Minister Joseph Conombo expressed Upper Volta's support for the "Rhodesian people" in their "struggle against the regime of [Prime Minister] Ian Smith" and said it would not participate if the Rhodesians compete.

In another move, at Islamabad, a government statement said Pakistan is reviewing its decision to participate in the Olympics. The statement said Pakistan 'has always opposed the racial policles of Rhodesia which are abhorrent to the human conscience."

The other nations which have made government announcements that they would withdraw are Kenya, the Sudan, Ethiopia, Zambia, Uganda, Liberia, Sierra Leone, Tanzania and Ghana. Egypt announced its decision had not been reached.

THE TRUE GOUDA

The town will begin its 700th anniversary star of the first event: a marriage of Gouda celebrations Saturday and cheese will be the cheese and Bordeaux wine in the market square.

By William A. Krauss

GOUDA, Helland, Aug. 17 (IHT),— "Please smile when you say 'cheese' around here," said J.F.A. Gaster cheerfully in the city's brisk market square the other morning-a morning of brilliant if untypical Dutch synshine.

"Because as everybody knows this side of China, Gouda lives by her cheese," he said. "Cheese is to Gouda what Burgundy is to Burgundy. It identifies us abroad, and it keeps the money rolling in."

So it follows that cheese, the true and anthentic Gouda, will be star of the show when the main events of the town's 700th aniversary program are launched Satur-day. The kickoff will be the "Marriage of Cheese and Wine."

Population 47,000

The marriage is scheduled for Saturday in Gouda's market square, the largest in Holland, surrounding the lavely Gothic town hall, just beyond the shadow at 18thcentury St. Jahn's Church (where Shakespeare is huried, according to Gouda lare), This is the square, too, of the farmers' cheese market, each Thursday morning from May through September, when the dealers haggle with the farmers over mountains of boerenkoas, the true country product, the McCoy of Gouda.

The town has the easy tranquillity of a flowering backwater, out of the world's turbulent mainstream-there's a calm order about the willows and the chestnuts, a thoughtful arrangement of canals and broad avenues. Though the population this year is pushing 47,000, all bearing up under the customary summer horde of visitors, people still find time to relex to the music of the hurdy-gurdy, and drink a small Dutch gin on a flower-filled terrace, and maybe puff a clay pipeful.

How ald is Gouds? Nabody knows. But it's clear in the record that 700 years ago this year, which is to say in 1272 (the year Marco Palo arrived in China), the village of Gouda was chartered as a free city, and that's what the celebration is all about.

"So there will be wine, women and cheese galare this coming weekend," said Mr. Gaster, who heads up the Vereniging Voor Vreemdelingenverkeer, meaning Tourist Information Office, which helps out people who don't speak Dutch. The wine will come from France, the women will hlossom in costumes of the romantic past, and the cheese will flow, if you'll permit the image, like water. The big week of festivities, the prime time, will close with banners and floodlights around midnight of Aug. 26eight days of junkets and excursions, parades and concerts, art exhibits and special markets antiques, handicrafts, churchwardens' pipes, wooden shoes, and cheese with practically everything.

On the marning of Aug. 19 the town council will convene in costumes of 700 years ago to hear the mayor pronounce a few well-chosen words to launch the merriment. Representatives of 10 French wine confraternities will have arrived from Bordeaux to solemnize, on that same day, the aforesaid "Marriage of Cheese and Wine." They'll lug along with them 600 bottles of Bordeaux wines, and in the great market square Dutchmen and their visitors will be invited to drink down and est up the true wine and the true cheese.

'Farmers' Cheese

What is this true cheese of Gouda? Well, it's not complicated. The true Gouda is the ante Gouda. The bosrenkous, literally "farmers' cheese," is produced exclusively at one of the 1,500 registered cheese farms in the Gouda region, Nowhere else, Goudatype fakes are manufactured elsewhere in the world, of course, in France, in Belgium, and perhaps Wisconsin. Imitation is the best farm of flattery, but the veritable Gouds, handmade by farmers' wives and farmers' daughters, bears an official stamp, or cheese-mark, reading Boerenkoos.

On Aug. 26, nearly the whole town will unite to play at theater. Some 600 Gouda people will don costumes for an afternoon's procession portraying great events of tha town's history, beginning with the charter of 1272 and extending to 1816, when Prince William returned from England following the defeat of Napoleon. There will be a profusion of shining swords, feathered hats, and sore feet to close Gouda's commemora-

Mexican Jailer Knows a Way to Keep Guards on Their Toes

By Charles Hillinger ALAMOS, Mexico, Aug. 17,-

Guards at the local fail in this mountain town are especially on the alert for jail hreaks.

If a prisoner escapes, the guard on duty has to finish out the escapee's term. "It's too bad for the guards. hut it does happen now and then," Toribio L. Esquer said. Mr. Esquer, 62, has been jaller at the Alamos Municipal Jail for 18 years. "There have been 16 escapes since I've been running the place," he noted. Only ance was a guard excused for the oversight. "The guard on duty was 75 years old," the jailer explained.

"The prisoner that escaped bad six more months to serve. The mayor made an exception because the guard was about to retire. He didn't have to serve the six months. It was just as well. The old guard would have a few days after he retired."

If more than one prisoner escapes, the guard on duty has ta serve the combined terms of all the jailbreakers.

Most prisoners in the Alamos Jail are in for minor offenses. Sentences for serious crimes generally are served at the Sonara State Prison at Hermosillo,

One unfortunate guard hired by Mr. Esquer, however, spent eight years behind hers. He served out the remainder of a murder sentence when the murderer fled.

The Alamos jail currently has 26 prisocers. There is room for "I know them all personally."

the jailer said. "This is a small town. Everybody knows every-body." There are four guards. Each guard works two hours, then has six hours off. Two of the guards are prisoners. The two prisoner guards re-died in jail. He dropped dead ceive 18 pesos ($128) a day for in the ceiling, making his way doubling as guards.

The other two guards receive 37.50 pesos ($3) a day plus living quarters for their families in two thatched houses behind the jail. Both prisoner guards are in fail for the same offense-stahhing another man in a barroom fight

It was the same fight. The jail is an old Spanish fort built in 1720. It became a jail in 1888. Since everybody knows every-body, the Alamos jail is informal, as jails go. Wives and girl friends can spend the night inside the cell with prisoners.

Most jail breaks have been through the roof. Each cell has a hole in the roof for ventilation. Prisoners make neckties, belts and ropes out of horse hair,

"Sometimes a prisoner will sneak a long rope he's working on into his cell," the jailer said.

off the roof and slip away." Arms Permitted Because the two prisoners now doubling as guards were respected members of the community, they are permitted to be armed to the air hole on a dark might.

Then, if the guard is unlucky,

the prisoner manages to jump with rifles while on duty on the Usually, there is at least one ex-guard serving out the sentence of an escapee. But at the present this is not the case. For that reason, the four guards are especially edgy about the possibility of an escape

Rafael Quintero, a prisoner guard serving 20 months for the harroom stabbing, was on the jail roof standing guard, He patted the butt of his rifle, then declared:
